

THE AGN EUROPEAN REGION

-- 2008 VAT Survey--

AGN International is an association of separate and independent accounting and consulting firms, represented in 86 countries with 480 office locations and 9,900 partners and staff. The AGN European Region conducts annual surveys of corporate, parent companies, value added (VAT), salary and social security and inheritance taxes. These surveys have been produced for a number of years and provide interesting comparisons from year to year and from country to country and give an insight into trends.

Introduction: Not only is it a condition of membership of the EU for all member states to have VAT but also for its main characteristics to be uniformly implemented. This should make cross border trading easy but in practice does not as there numerous local variations which can lead to costly errors, penalties and high compliance costs.

Nevertheless VAT continues to demonstrate its popularity among fiscal authorities as its use has spread to almost every jurisdiction within the European Region. So the chance of failing to comply with local rules and thereby incur penalties, interest and other associated costs continues to grow.

The objective of the AGN Europe VAT survey is to collate data about the main characteristics of VAT as it is implemented in the European Region jurisdictions and to try to highlight the key differences between them.

It also acts as the basis for the VAT Survey Brochure which is a useful reference source in respect of some of the basics of the VAT system.

Countries Covered: The 2008 VAT survey covers more than 30 countries including non EU members such as Croatia, Liechtenstein, Norway, Russia, Switzerland and the Ukraine, as well as providing key data for every EU member state.

Results of the 2008 Survey

The survey shows that there continue to be opportunities and pitfalls for cross border businesses. This is not unexpected in relation to non EU countries who may be influenced but are clearly not bound by EU VAT rules. What is more surprising is the degree of variation demonstrated by those jurisdictions that are inside the EU.

VAT Rates: VAT suffered on expenses incurred while away on business in other countries is, in theory, recoverable. In practice it often ends up being an additional cost and with VAT rates ranging from less than 10% up to 25% it can represent quite a substantial additional cost.

Add to this the wide variation of reduced rates leading to a high degree of complexity facing any business seeking to do business in another jurisdiction and thereby increasing compliance costs.

However for those that embrace the differences and make an effort to find out about them they can represent an opportunity to optimise VAT by taking these differences into account when choosing where to site a new business.

VAT Registration: The huge variation in registration thresholds represents a trap for the unwary. Many businesses assume that VAT is a simple enough tax for it to be safely ignored when starting up a new business venture. This can lead to disastrous results. With VAT registration thresholds ranging from zero (Netherlands) to more than €500,000 (Russia) it is clear that local advice is essential and should be taken at an early stage.

Periodic VAT Returns: Even for those businesses that recognise their obligations and VAT register the complications continue. VAT reporting periods vary hugely and range from monthly filing through to annual filing.

Likewise the time available for sending in the VAT returns can be as short as 10 days (Germany) through to 60 days (Ireland and Switzerland) thereby adding to the complexities associated with complying with the local VAT rules.

Conclusion: When VAT was introduced in the UK it was described as being a “simple” tax. The data collected by AGN Europe demonstrates that this is very far from the truth and makes it abundantly clear that local advice taken at an early stage is essential.

Before taking or refraining from action in relation to the above, specific professional advice should be taken.
